I have had the pleasure of working with John Bourdage of Social Edge Seminars on several occasions. His knowledge of the foodservice industry and beyond has been of great help to both my customers and me.

John can speak on several different topics and at any level. I first hired John to speak on proper table settings. He combined this seminar with very interesting history and proper etiquette. He really managed to take this "not so interesting topic" and make it very interesting!

My second seminar with John involved proper decanting of wine and the right glass for the right wine. John combined this seminar with personal accounts and answered many questions.

But, the best seminar (for me, personally) was the time I had with John for three hours while driving to a seminar. I learned so much about many aspects of the foodservice industry!

I know John has worked with some of my customers directly as a consultant, and they have been more than thankful for his help. He is the right person for both consulting and seminars. John is an extremely interesting person with much knowledge of the foodservice industry. I fully endorse him and look forward to working with John Bourdage in the near future!

Sincerely,
